JUDGE RULES REPORTER OUT

Kentucky Court Refuses To Permit Tennessee Newspaper Hear Trial.

MT. STERLING, KY., Jan. 6.—Circuit Judge Henry R. Prewitt today struck from the records the motion of Attorney W. H. Townsend of Lexington which he had denied Monday night to permit Jack Bryan, Knoxville, Tenn. News Sentinel reporter, to cover the murder trial of William Hightower, mine union leader of Harlow-ko.

The court's action in effect it was believed will block the appeal by attorneys for the Knoxville paper to restrain Judge Prewitt from barring Bryan as it removed the ground for any appeal.

It was presumed however that the court would formally bar Bryan if the reporter attempted to attend the trial. Bryan was sent here to replace John T. Moutoux whom the judge barred because of alleged false articles printed about the trial.

Youths To Face Murder Charges

Inmates of Industrial School Admit Burning Cabin, Eight Persons

STORIES CHECKED

Boys Say Act Was Caused By Grudge

GALLIPOLIS, O., Jan. 6.—First degree murder charges will be filed either late today or tomorrow against two youthful Lancaster industrial school inmates who have allegedly confessed to firing a farm house near here last spring which resulted in the death of a father and his seven children, County Prosecutor Harry M. Miller declared today.

CONFESSIONS TRUE

Preliminary investigation has shown that Albert Reymor, 15, of Gallipolis, and Ellsworth Mowyer, 17, of Bucyrus, the two industrial school inmates, were truthful in details of their purported confession to the crime, Miller said.

Formal charges, however, will not be lodged until officials are absolutely certain that the two boys were responsible for the holocaust. Reymor and Mowyer are now serving terms in the industrial school on charges of automobile theft.

Gruesome details of the horrid crime—plotted for revenge—were checked one by one today by Miller, assisted by Sheriff Charles Swanson of Gallia-ko.

PERISH IN CABIN

The victims of the crime were James White, 59, against whom the boys declared in their confession they held a grudge because he beat one of them during a fist fight, and White's seven children.

They perished, with their dog, in a cabin home was swept by fire last April. Only one of White's children escaped the holocaust. He was George, 12.

The alleged confession to the crime was given by the two boys when they became conscious stricken by their deed. They first told their frightful story to George H. Lamb, assistant superintendent of the industrial school. Later they repeated the details to Gallia-ko officials.

While authorities progressed warily in their investigation, hinting it might be possible the youths were seeking publicity or a temporary change of environment, they were inclined to attach significance to the alleged confession because of the similarity between the boy's statements and the actual events of the disastrous blaze.

STORY MATCH

The youths claimed they started the fire on April 4, when it actually occurred on April 7, Swanson explained. Few discrepancies existed otherwise, however.

According to Swanson, the boys informed him that they visited the White cabin, located in a wooded section near here, early in the morning and first nailed all doors and windows. Assured that they had blocked all avenues of escape, they then ignited the building.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—Hundreds of girls in their teens are revolving slowly around a huge roadside circuit of vice that embraces the entire East, and, by the pitiful sale of their bodies, are reaping an unholy fortune for a vicious gang of criminals.

Evidence already uncovered by the federal government in its investigation into the machinations of this white slave ring shows an appallingly efficient business set-up behind the traffic. No legitimate organization with extensive interstate ramifications has a smoother running machine.

AIRMEN HUNT LOST WOMAN

Five Fast Planes Being Groomed For Trip Over Wooded Area Today.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Jan. 6.—Five fast-flying planes were warmed up and groomed to take the air today in search of Mrs. Ruth Stewart, St. Louis aviation enthusiast, and Mrs. Debbie Stanford, Toronto, Ont., from whom no word has been heard since their plane plunged into a fogbank over Sterrett's Gap near Carlisle last night.

One of the planes, with Gentry Shelton of St. Louis at the controls, carried an International News Service reporter to aid in the search. Shelton, piloted Mrs. Stewart's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Woerner, from Pittsburgh to Harrisburg last night.

VISIBILITY POOR

Shelton waited impatiently for visibility to improve to lead the squadron of searching planes into the air. Although optimistic over results of the search, he admitted he had spent a sleepless night worrying over the two women who had planned a flight from New York to Havana.

Two of the searching planes were placed at Shelton's disposal by a gasoline company and two were offered by the Harrisburg airport. Shelton was at the controls of his own ship, a speedy monoplane.

The Ashville to South Bloomfield road was included in the list of highways added to the state highway department's system today.

A hearing on the addition of this road was held here several weeks ago.

new routes serving communities and territories not heretofore touched by the state's system.

PLAN IMPROVEMENTS

Scheduled improvements on the roads absorbed by the state system will be made as soon as funds permit. Selection of the roads to be added was made after hearings conducted by a committee of highway officials during the past three months.

On most of the roads, a minimum of 60 feet of right-of-way has been guaranteed the state, free of charge. However, a letter has gone out to each division engineer, ordering that no construction work be commenced until this minimum right-of-way has been provided, either by the abutting land owners or local governmental units.

TWO YEAR PROGRAM

The roads were added by Merrill under authority given highway directors by a legislative act stating that 200 miles may be taken over each year. By adding 400 miles at this time, no more roads will be taken over until December, 1933, or January, 1934.

But learning of the number of potentially dangerous criminals held in the confines of the prison the jurors urged in their report that additional arms be purchased immediately.

JOY WALKS
BY LESLIE L. PONTIUS.
THIS is January first, 1932 and I suspect that we have all been so busy manufacturing material with which to pave the new year that we all feel very virtuous.
There is no question but that the world would be a better place in which to live if we would all carry out our resolutions. The greatest trouble seems to be in finding the particular things that we can give up. Most of us are so good that we have no besetting sin. Now, if we could make resolutions for our friends and neighbors, it would be fine. We can think of a number of things which our neighbors ought to do, or stop doing, and I am sure if they would follow our advice they would be more congenial and pleasant.
I believe that there is not one of us but who, in the depths of his heart, says at the beginning of a new year, 'I will strive harder; I will do better; I will accomplish more in the year than I am just commencing.' And even though we do not realize all our hopes, we are all better men and women for the thought and effort.
But I must not moralize—it is the time for rejoicing. The old year is ended; the bright new year, with all its possibilities for success and happiness, is before us. Let's go.
Floyd Bartley had been told of a wild and woolly place, where no white man had ever been, between Richmondale and West Junction. So this morning when the skies showed signs of clearing, he called me and we resolved to start the new year by exploring a new locality. We followed State Route 23 to Chillicothe; then east on Route 50 to Londonberry; then south on the Vigo road to West Junction. Before reaching West Junction we stopped by the roadside to inspect a clump of bright green moss and we were greeted with the bright smiling face of a little bluet. Our first flower of the new year! The blooming time of the bluet is from April to July, but we have found them blooming each month of the year.

West Junction is a sleepy little hamlet of two houses, an abandoned storehouse and a telegraph station. It is located at the junction of the C. H. & D. and B. & O. Railroads. Leaving the auto at the station we hiked along the C. H. & D. right of way. Our ardor was slightly dampened by the rain that fell, and several times we were on the point of turning back. But hopes and expectations never materialize if we allow a little shower of rain to spoil them. The wooded slopes were resplendent in their winter glory and they were a haven for birds. At no time this winter have we seen so many wrens, cardinals, woodpeckers, juncos, bluebirds, song sparrows and towhees—gay little sprites of seclusion and leafy retreats. A little garter snake had come out to bask in the sun that shone for a time, but all of his hopes and expectations were gone. The new year for him stopped where it began. His head had been crushed by the heel of some vandal's boot. Why do people see red when they see a snake? They are harmless if let alone and are one of man's best friends.

We were attracted by a colony of great scouring-rushes. The casual observer would pass them by as being the common variety, but the trained eye notes the difference. This was a rare find for us and we collected a few for our friend at the State Herbarium. I will not try to enumerate all of the plants we saw. There were too many. True, only the dead stalks were standing now but we saw enough to make us want to go back when the summer comes and when they are in their glory.
There is nothing wild and woolly about the place—just a picturesque pass where Saltcreek flows through the hills.

BIG CITIES SCENE

Getting behind the scenes of this filthy business has been difficult going for Special Assistant Attorney General Neil Purkinshaw, in charge of the inquiry. The girls are in deadly fear of being "put on the spot" if they "squeal," and a majority of those taken in custody here, in Baltimore, in Philadelphia and elsewhere are maintaining a sullen silence.

The few who have "cracked" in police parlance—are remaining in jail at their own request because they know they are far safer there until after the department of justice has completed its case.

Several of our people attended the Ohio Education Association program at Columbus, Wednesday night, Dec. 30th, and heard the all-state orchestra of 150 pieces and the all-state chorus of 450 voices. Eight of our students were in the chorus: Nellie Arledge, Evelyn Hampshire, Marlene Riffel, Martha Riggins, Edgar Harval, Guy Mowry, Marshall Spangler, and Paul Wilson. The boys stopped at the Desbler from Tuesday until Thursday. The program was an excellent one in every way. Among those attending this and other programs of the meeting were Mrs. Alkire, Mrs. Johnson, Miss Radcliffe, Miss Shaner, Mr. Seitz and Mr. Spangler. Mr. Seitz, who attended the entire session, was elected a member of the Education Council. This council consists of 36 members, 12 elected each year for three year terms, and its duties consist in survey and research work together with conclusions and recommendations on the various school problems coming up for consideration by the Ohio Education Association.

Last Saturday night was alumni night in our gym. Three games were played and the varsity was victorious in the two main tilts after losing to the alumni in the preliminary. Both of the boys' games were close and exciting from start to finish. In the preliminary game to the alumni boys held a small lead throughout the game. In the main contest the lead changed several times but neither team ever had a safe margin. Only six alumni girls appeared in uniform, and the varsity squad had no trouble winning. However, the alumni girls played well and held their opponents to a fairly low score.

Boys' preliminary, 17-12. Main tilt, 23-18. Girls, 29-14.

Alumni players: Marie Dumm, Marlene Hampshire, Mary Rader, Mary Tolbert, Mary Valentine, Hazel Wolford, Carl Anderson, Charles Boggs, Forrest Brown, David Dunkle, Ralph Enoch, Ansel Estell, Marvin Hemphire, Donald Kempton, Wells Wilson, Harold Wolford, Lester Wolford, Harry Wright and Samuel Wright. Referee, George B. Stoker of Columbus.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—The administration plan to rush the two billion dollar reconstruction finance corporation bill through the senate was blocked today by Senator Elaine, Republican of Wisconsin, who charged it was "brought on the depression" and to "produce an upward turn in the stock market."

Blaine objected to immediate consideration of the measure protesting against the administration's haste to enact a bill which "will provide not a single mouth full of food for the hungry or a single work day for the working men."

Under the rule the bill went to the calendar. Administration leaders can start debate on it tomorrow if they command a majority vote of the senate.

Feature-Length Film

There are about 7,000 feet of film in a feature-length photoplay. To produce this footage it is usually necessary to take 100,000 to 150,000 feet of negative. The 7,000 feet of the finished feature is made up of many short scenes pieced together. There are as many as 200 to 300 scenes in the average film.

Demand for Goldfish

The raising of goldfish has become an industry which annually produces 27,000,000 of the common variety, valued at $500,000, and 4,500,000 of the fancy species, worth $400,000.

PICKAWAY-TWP. SCHOOL

Nurse Bartholomew and Dr. Beale of our county department of health are giving our pupils their physical examinations this week.

Attendance Monday and Tuesday of this week was not as good as usual. Nearly 10 per cent were absent. Two families are quarantined with light cases of scarlet fever, one has mumps and several have bad colds.

Our board of education reorganized Monday night by electing Shirley Dreisbach as president and Henry Dunkle as vice-president. Leo McKenzie was re-employed as clerk and Lewis Smith as building custodian. The other members of the board are Ralph Head, Albert Musselman and Edward Wilkins.

Death has again invaded our community and this time has taken one of our beloved pupils. Rita McKenzie was a brilliant and an extremely good-natured girl. She was earnest and sincere in all of her work, and all of her teachers and schoolmates liked her because of her many splendid qualities. She has been called to her eternal reward and we again are left to wonder at the Divine Plan. We extend our sincere sympathy to the bereaved family.

Several of our people attended the Ohio Education Association program at Columbus, Wednesday night, Dec. 30th, and heard the all-state orchestra of 150 pieces and the all-state chorus of 450 voices. No Gloom In Religion
THE sense of humor has been called a saving grace. It has helped many to weather a storm and saved many others from a sound licking. Had the Kaiser possessed the gift the world might have been spared a frightful catastrophe. He took himself too seriously.

Even the Bible makes room for humor. Hear much-afflicted Job making sport of his three false comforters: "No doubt but ye are the people and wisdom shall die with you." In the story of the Magi did not the three wise men from out of the East make a laughing stock of Old Herod? And when the Pharisees told Jesus that another Herod was bent on doing him mischief he told them: "Go ye, and tell that fox."

Why shouldn't there be humor and mirth in all things? What is there wrong in a little innocent mirth in either bishops or red-blooded young people? There is no better safety valve than harmless amusement. Religion should not be a killjoy. Why should anyone give it a forbidding aspect? Religion that makes itself in gloom and despair is counterfeit and was outlived centuries ago.

Would those who complain that there is too much "pep" and pleasure in church activities for young people, have them skulk in dark corners to hatch mischief and go about to poison life with a ghastly pessimism? Healthy youth must sing and smile and yell and if denied the right to blow off its excess energy in this manner within the church will go elsewhere to explode. The world long ago outlived the religion of melancholy piety and sadness.

Younger Women
AN authority on hygiene and physical development is author of the statement that women are younger today at forty than ever and, at all ages, are healthier than the women of preceding generations.

One generation ago the average woman of forty was an old lady who wore a shawl across her shoulders while she sat by the fire and crocheted. She was well past the prime of life and all tired out.

Today the woman of forty looks thirty, plays golf and tennis and drives an automobile during the day and dances or plays cards far into the night, and then is down first to breakfast in the morning fresh and ready for another day which would have been killing pace in grandmother's day.

One of the causes of this extraordinary healthfulness of the modern woman is the development of her clothing. She no longer wraps herself up like an Egyptian mummy or loads herself down with pounds of heavy and superfluous raiment.

But, hasn't woman's attitude toward herself contributed much to her transformation? Though a mother of seven she can now dance, swim, go in for the sports and driving, and dress youthfully without fear of social ostracism. No longer is the "respectable" woman's condition in life just two degrees removed from the absolute imprisonment of the harem.

Gone
S CANNING the columns of real estate advertising, a home-seeker found houses with "dance rooms," with "lounges" and "libraries," and some advertising "kitchens" and dining rooms, but nowhere in his long search could he find a house advertising a "drawing room" or a "parlor" as part of its facilities.

Are parlors and drawing rooms included in the list of lost things that never will be missed? Their passing out of the home has been rapid yet so surreptitiously as to be unnoticed.

For the benefit of those moderns who can't remember when parlors and drawing rooms were as essential to the home as bedrooms, it must be explained that the old-fashioned parlor was a large front room on the first floor to which the family was never admitted except when company came and when was cautioned against marring the best furniture and stirring up the dust. The drawing room was the rich man's parlor.

"The CZARINA'S RUBIES"

by Sidney Warwick

CHAPTER LV
Jim heard the news with relief. "Tomorrow if possible we'll run over to Monksilver ourselves," he said. "That mysterious fish, it must have some definite meaning. Probably quite a simple explanation. Anyway, I want to have a shot at solving it myself."

"Well, good hunting," said Katharine. "I hope soon to be able to congratulate you, Miss Faring, on the recovered possession of your family jewels."

He shook hands with Milly and Katharine. Jim and Bill walked with him to the gate. "I suppose you won't call in the local police over this raid?" Katharine said.

"Hardly worth while in the circumstances," said Bill. "No, it would hardly serve much purpose now. The big fish will soon be in the net. Oh, I'm not talking idly."

"Why tomorrow?" Katharine asked. "Oh, because tomorrow may prove rather an uneventful day, I should say. You've already guessed, of course, why I'm down here. For no other reason than to bring to book one of the most sinister figures of the criminal world."

"You mean Martell?" Katharine asked. "Martell, of course. The dominant figure in the far-reaching evil network of which Beggar's Court has become the center. Oh, not this conspiracy against Severn—something utterly apart from that. Will it surprise you when I say that your friend, Severn, only comes, as it were, incidentally into my business with Martell?"

"I was out on the trail after Martell before I had ever heard of Severn's name—a trail that led from Sing Sing to this quiet English village."

Jim paused, as if he had told all he meant to tell. Then suddenly: "Night after night I've been watching in the grounds of Beggar's Court, playing spy—and though those rogues had come to suspect an elusive unknown someone, they never suspected me." And Katharine gave a little laugh, rather a grim laugh. "My lameness was an effective disguise. Tonight, as you saw, I deliberately exposed a bit of my hand—let 'em see I wasn't really lame. Oh, they tumbled to the significance of that."

"But why put them on their guard?" asked Bill puzzled. "Call it a sudden whim if you like," was the smiling careless answer. "For I had nothing to gain by it—except the satisfaction of seeing that first shiver of fear creep into their faces, the sudden realization of a danger at their very elbow that they had never dreamed of. If you knew Martell's record you wouldn't wonder that I was tempted to allow myself that satisfaction."

There was sudden smoldering passion behind the cold, hard voice, touched by what intense personal feeling in that deadly enmity it reflected.

VEHEMENT
"A man like that—my God, he deserves to suffer!" Katharine broke out vehemently. "Tonight I decided that he and his fellow scoundrels should see the shadow of the end suddenly stretching out to touch them with its chill. They'll walk now with fear always at their side until—what's coming to them soon. I might have only a personal satisfaction to gain—but I had nothing to lose by showing my hand. The end's so near now, so certain, so inescapable. For those two men there's—tomorrow coming."

They had reached the garden gate. Katharine held out his hand. Evidently he did not mean to explain himself or say any more.

"Just now you said the trail led you from Sing Sing," Bill remarked abruptly. "About a year back I happened to go over Sing Sing. I have an oddly retentive memory for faces—and I remember one man there who the governor told me was in for life. The curious thing is that man is now out of prison."

Jim looked hard at him for a moment, then gave a short laugh. "Your memory is better than mine in this case, Mr. Grayson. For I don't remember you on the occasion you speak of. Well, I may have something to tell you about that, too, after tomorrow."

He passed through the gate and strode toward his cottage. Bill's puzzled eyes followed the tall figure as it disappeared in the mist. "Who and what the deuce is Katharine?" Bill said. "Knows how to play a lone hand and keep mum anyway."

Then he shrugged his shoulders. "Well, so long as this sinister circle's smashed and Severn rescued whether by Katharine's efforts or ours—what's the odds? But I wonder what the big thing is he's promised us for tomorrow?"

Last night's fog had gone and the world outside his bedroom window was aglow with mellow autumn sunlight. Just the sort of day to have spent uninterrupted with Katharine, was Jim's first waking thought, as he opened his eyes to the shaft of gold quivering in between the drawn curtains.

To have set out in the car as soon as breakfast was over for a long day together, just he and Katharine, with no more settled plan than to follow the lines of the telegraph poles into the unknown and fetch up for lunch somewhere, anywhere, in the next county but one—

Jim pulled himself out of the delightful train of thought with a regretful sigh. No such luck for him. With this new definite turn of events, that worrying business at Beggar's Court was too urgent for a truant day with Katharine. Not only was the seeing Detective Inspector Haste that afternoon; there was the question of Martell. That his warning in that quarter had not fallen on deaf ears Jim felt pretty sanguine. Last night Martin had been very near the breaking point of panic-surrender. Within the next hour or two Martin might ring him up.

EXPECTANT
Besides, if Katharine was a reliable prophet, something big and momentous affecting the case was on the very eve of happening. No, he and Katharine would have to wait.

Jim raced through the business of dressing, with the alluring thought in his mind of a snatched ten minutes alone with Katharine before breakfast.

It was almost difficult to realize that less than a week ago, so crowded a week it had been, they had met for the first time after more than two years—and Katharine had even forgotten his name. And now she had promised to marry him. Jim smiled very contentedly at his soap-lathered face in the mirror as he shaved. Even yet his luck seemed almost too wonderful to be true.

As he left his room Jim ran into Milly. She and Bill had been told the news, of course, and equally, of course, both had been delighted—though it was hardly news that had come as a surprise to Milly.

"I just saw Katharine in the garden this morning, Jim," she told him to add smilingly. "Try not to be more than ten minutes late for breakfast, you two."

Jim made no rash promises. He ran downstairs and out into the garden to Katharine. At the sound of his footsteps she turned with quick eagerness. The wind that had blown the fog out to sea had brought an enchanting color to her face: the split gold of the sunlight seemed to play hide and seek in the dusky shadows of her hair.

"Oh, my beautiful!" he whispered, as for a moment his arms went round her with a little thrill, his eyes on the flushed loveliness of her face. "I feel as if someone—your—had made me a present of the world!"

HAPPY
She gave a little happy laugh like breathless broken music. "It's dear of you to think so, Jim!" she told him softly. Then in gay smiling reproach: "But why did you wait till five minutes to breakfast time to tell me?"

"Too bad that you should have so lagged a lover, darling!" he agreed. "But anyway Milly's given us ten minutes grace—and she knows that we shall steal another ten at least to add to 'em. So that is all right."

They wandered down the long garden towards the estuary that bounded it, happy as children, with Mike the terrier making a rather bored third. For once no one seemed to be taking any notice of him at all. From afar came the sound of the gong for breakfast, and Mike seemed surprised that neither Katharine nor Jim appeared to pay any heed to its summons. He paused, watching them expectantly, waiting for them to turn, then at last as if losing patience, trotted back solemnly towards the house alone. If breakfast meant nothing to them, there was none of that nonsense about Mike.

"But surely our stolen ten minutes must be up, Jim?" cried Katharine presently, as a distant clock chimed. And almost simultaneously from the top of the garden Milly's voice hailed them.

"Hello! Breakfast ready, I suppose? Just coming."

"Oh, breakfast's been over ages!" Milly cried smilingly. "You're wanted on the telephone. Someone who won't give his name."

Was it Martin? Eagerly Jim betook himself to the house, snatched up the receiver.

"Hello, Mr. Wynter speaking. Who are you?"

"Martin." The husky, frightened voice was almost unrecognizable. "I've decided to—to do what you asked, Mr. Wynter. Can I come to see you tonight about six?"

"Yes—if you can't make it earlier."

"I want to come after dusk falls," the hurried voice went on. "I haven't been speaking to you, or they might suspect something as it is. They've just gone out, and I've snatched this chance of speaking. I've decided to tell all I know about Mr. Severn—where he is—everything. But I haven't talk any longer now—they might come back suddenly, and find me at the telephone. I'll come by boat to Manorways, Mr. Wynter. It will be safest, as I might be seen going in at your gate."

"That's all right. But at least you can tell me now. Where is Mr. Severn being kept a prisoner?" said Jim urgently.

But no answer came. Already the terrified man at the other end had hung off.

CAST IS WORKING FOR SCHOOL PLAY

With a surprisingly new cast furnishing the laughs, the admission price cut, a percent of proceeds being given to organizations in the high school sponsoring ticket-selling campaigns and new "between-act features," adding for the occasion, a large crowd is expected to attend Circleville high school's Little Theatre first production, "Who Wouldn't Be Crazy" which will be given in the high school auditorium on January 27 and 28.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

To the Editor,
Dear Sir:

I note that in your issue of Saturday last you gave a timely and proper warning against any unlawful action toward persons charged with violence in the robbery and murder of John Kidney in Monroe.

While there is no doubt an intense feeling of indignation against the alleged perpetrators of the terrible outrage and felony lately committed in our county, it is impossible that the thought can be entertained for a moment that another crime should be added by resorting to mob law. The officers enforcing the law have been commendably diligent in running down the alleged offenders and in bringing about indictment. The Court is already setting the cases down for trial and in carrying into execution these requirements to the constitution of granting the persons accused a speedy public trial by an impartial jury.

The necessary cost of such a trial will be great although that fact cannot be dispensed with. It is the expense of a jury and the witnesses which are usually the principal items. In the present cases, the number of witnesses are necessarily limited as there were no eye witnesses except the perpetrators of the murder and the victims and persons to whom admissions have been made. Upon conviction these costs will be refunded to the county by the State.

Mob violence under the statutes of Ohio is a dangerous undertaking to punish crime and the person or persons so punishing the alleged criminal may become as great or greater criminal himself.

Aside from this he is liable in damages as well as the county in which he is a tax-payer.

The usual way provided by law is the only safe course. That course is amply provided for in Pickaway-co.

I N. Abernethy.

Fewer, Less Severe Colds With "Colds-Control" Plan

Discovery By Makers of Vick's VapoRub Makes Possible Better "Control-of-Colds" in the Home.

HIGH COSTS REDUCED

Relief from much of the burden imposed by colds is now available in every home. The Vick Plan for "Control-of-Colds" lessens the number, the severity and the duration of colds. It reduces the family's "Cold-Tax" in money, loss of time and health.

A New Vick Discovery
This plan has been perfected by the makers of Vicks VapoRub—made possible by Vicks Nose & Throat Drops. Based on a new idea for "preventing" colds, this new Vick formula is an ideal companion to VapoRub, the modern way of "treating" colds. Used together, they aid and supplement each other in the Vick Plan for better "Control-of-Colds," which follows:

1.—Before a Cold Starts
Watch yourself whenever you have been exposed to anything that you know is apt to give you a cold, such as—

Contact with others having fresh colds—crowds, stuffy ill-ventilated rooms, public places—a night on a Pullman or a dusty automobile ride—sudden changes in temperature—inhalation smoke, dust, gases—excesses in living, such as over-eating, smoking or drinking, which reduce body resistance—after a hard day when you are over-tired.

Then—if you feel that stuffy, sneezy irritation of the nasal passages, Nature's usual signal that a cold is coming on—use Vicks Nose Drops at once. Just a few drops on each nostril. Repeat every hour or so if needed. This will prevent many colds by stopping them before they get beyond the nose and throat—where most colds start.

2.—After a Cold Starts
At night, massage the throat and chest with Vicks VapoRub (now available in white "stainless" form, if you prefer). Spread on thick and cover with warm flannel. Leave the bed-clothing loose around the neck so that the medicated vapors arising can be inhaled all night long.

If the air-passages are badly clogged with mucus, melt some Vapo-Rub in a bowl of hot water and inhale the steaming vapors for several minutes. (If there is a cough, you will like the new Vicks Cough Drop—actually medicated with ingredients of Vicks Vapo-Rub.)

During the day—any time, any place—use Vicks Nose Drops every few hours as needed. This gives you full 24-hour treatment and without the risks of too much internal "dosing" which so often upsets digestion—especially of children.

Trial Offer Guarantee.
Every druggist in the United States is offering Vicks Nose & Throat Drops and Vicks VapoRub on the following trial guarantee:

Use together as described in the Vick Plan for better "Control-of-Colds." Unless you are delighted with results, your druggist is authorized to refund your money—Adv.

There are a great many Mexicans and Indians here—streets and stores—there are plenty of them all the time. There is a Mexican quarter here where the stores, res-

We have a nice little Spanish bungalow home and will tell you all about it in my next letter. And as Lowell Thomas says over the radio "so long" until then. With kindest regards from us all I remain (in Tucson),
